Recycled fibre mattress

No bedroom is complete without the ultimate plush mattress to sink into, but if you're looking for an eco-friendly option, try a recycled fibre version. This mattress from Silent Night combines comfort and breathability, and is also made up of fibres made from 150 plastic bottles. Not only less energy-intensive to produce than new fibres, but contributing to reducing plastic waste as well, it's sure to help you sleep at night... The Eco Breathe Mattress collection is priced from £328 for a single.

Bamboo bedding

Turn your bedroom into a calming haven with natural fabrics and recycled fibres. Muted shades will always bring a sense of calm to a room, and this understated yet stylish bedding from Urban Collective is no exception. Made from a bamboo and cotton blend – with bamboo requiring less water to grow than cotton – it's a more sustainable option. Dove cotton-bamboo duvet double, £139. urbancollective.com

Kitchen splashback

Add an extra dimension to a minimalist scheme by introducing high-shine surfaces in a range of warm, grey tones. When designing your kitchen, it's worth considering alternative materials – such as these AluSplash splashbacks made from aluminium, which gives a similarly reflective surface to glass but is less resource-intensive to produce. Plus, it's recyclable, non-toxic and lead-free, making it a truly green option for your home. alusplash.com
